Listed here are the lectures, seminars and events on Late Antiquity in Oxford

Trinity term
2020-2021
(April - June)

The details of all these events are also available on the OCLA web-site
https://ocla.web.ox.ac.uk

The activities of the Oxford Centre for Late Antiquity are made possible by the generosity of donors to the Centre.
With the addition of the new material, Manar al-Athar now has over 9600 photographs related to Cairo online. #Egypt #Cairo #culturalheritage

Dear all,

Please find below the listings for academic events being held this Trinity Term in the field of Late Antiquity. We all hope that this will be the last OCLA booklet advertising events which are exclusively online, and that Michaelmas Term will see a return to our regular meetings in person, the importance of which has been underlined for us all in the past twelve months.

I would like to draw your attention to a new but annual seminar amongst the listings, under the name ‘After Rome and Further East’. This seminar replaces the regular ‘After Rome’ seminar which was long ago established by Bryan Ward-Perkins and John Matthews, and which last met in 2019. It continues that seminar’s interest in both textual and material approaches to the world of late antiquity, but extends the definition of late antiquity to the end of the first millennium, and into the Middle East and Central Asia. The seminar is a collaboration between the History Faculty and Oriental Institute, and we hope to see many of you there each Thursday evening.

Finally, on behalf of everyone I would like again to thank Dr Vendi Jukić Buća, the OCLA Secretary, for all of her assistance this academic year. Vendi is responsible for compiling and designing this booklet for us all, but also for administering the Centre and for launching and presiding over its new Facebook page, which can be found at https://www.facebook.com/OCLAsocial/. For all enquiries or for notifications not listed here, Vendi can be contacted at ocla@history.ox.ac.uk.

With best wishes and hopes to see you soon

Ancient Architecture Discussion Group Special Lecture

Dr J. Martínez Jiménez

The urban water cycle of late antique Iberia

Many Roman cities had aqueducts and piped water for centuries; it is natural to assume that cities and city life evolved around this easy access to water, and it is unsurprising that, when aqueducts eventually ceased to function, cities and city life had to adapt to the new circumstances.

Javier Martínez will be presenting in this lecture the main results of his book ‘Aqueducts and Urbanism in Post-Roman Hispania’ (Gorgias Press, 2019), which is based on his 2014 OCLA thesis.

Manar al-Athar is Arabic for ‘Guide to Archaeology’ and has been chosen because Manara, in Egypt, refers to both the Lighthouse of Alexandria (the Pharos) and to minarets. This conveys the transition, and often continuity, covered by the chronological range of the material.

‘The Last Statues of Antiquity’ database is from 4 May 2012 accessible to all and fully searchable, with over 2600 individual entries. The database consists of the published evidence for statuary and inscribed statue bases set up after AD 284, that were new, newly dedicated, or newly re-worked. This database was completed and made public in May 2012 (with only some minor revisions thereafter).

The project maps the cult of saints as a system of beliefs and practices in its earliest and most fluid form, from its origins until around AD 700 (by which date most cult practices were firmly established): the evolution from honouring the memory of martyrs, to their veneration as intercessors and miracle-workers; the different ways that saints were honoured and their help solicited; the devotion for relics, sacred sites and images; the miracles expected from the saints.

Central to the project is a searchable database, on which all the evidence for the cult of saints will be collected, presented (in its original languages and English translation), and succinctly discussed, whether in Armenian, Coptic, Georgian, Greek, Latin or Syriac.

Endangered Archaeology in the Middle East and North Africa

Supported by the Arcadia Fund and the Cultural Protection Fund and based at the Universities of Oxford, Leicester, and Durham, EAMENA was established in January 2015 to respond to the increasing threats to archaeological sites in the Middle East and North Africa. This project uses satellite imagery to rapidly record and make available information about archaeological sites and landscapes which are under threat.

EAMENA's spatial database will provide the fundamental information for each site, including the level of risk and how each site relates to one another. It will be accessible to all heritage professionals and institutions with an interest and passion for the wonderfully rich and diverse archaeological heritage of the Middle East and North Africa. Not all damage and threats to the archaeology can be prevented, but they can be mitigated and so at the core of our project is the desire for excellence in heritage management. To this end, EAMENA works with relevant authorities on the ground to limit likely damage, share information and skills, strengthen networks and raise awareness. Fieldwork and outreach are essential components of the project and the EAMENA team will target investigations to the most threatened sites, visiting (where possible) to assess site conditions, make detailed records and liaise with national authorities to share data and findings.
